EXACT REPLICA

Army Grenade

(AS USED IN HAND COMBAT)

Yes, this is your chance to be the first in your neighborhood to have this realistic "weapon". It's an exact replica of the one used by the army and our marines in fierce hand-to-hand combat, to wipe out machine-gun nests, demolish trenches, "get" concealed snipers, defend against massed attack.

Just cock the firing mechanism, load the cap and you're ready! Imagine — you're a marine creeping up on that machine-gun nest, your grenade is in your hand. You creep close, low. Now you're in range, you pull the safety pin with your teeth and throw! Bull's eye, right into the nest. Blast! The machine gun flies out broken. Now silence. Your buddies cheer — the advance starts up again!

This grenade explodes 4 seconds after pulling pin as it strikes ground. Can't break. Heavy gauge steel firing mechanism. Uses standard caps. Can be exploded over and over. Comes complete with throwing instructions. (Parents: This toy grenade is completely harmless!) Clip ad, write your name and address clearly in margin and send it with $1.00 plus 25c shipping charge — cash, check or money order to:

SPACE SHIFT

For the past two months, our ergo-cells had been dead. We were actually coasting on our own momentum. Only Commander James Harper and myself, second in command of the spaceship ORNOS, knew the seriousness of the situation. We were now eight years and ten months outward bound from Earth. Headed with a group of colonists for the Asteroid MENIS, on the edge of the second galaxy.

There were children with us who knew only about Earth from what they were learning in their classroom. We carried almost ten thousand passengers. Actually we were a self sustaining group. Theoretically we could continue within the spaceship as long as the internal energy units continued.

"I have sent out contact messages on the half hour," I told my commander. "The nearest spaceship is the WANDERER. It would take her about a year to catch up with us if she changed her course."

"We are off the beam now," sighed Commander James Harper. "There are no spare ergo-cells on MENIS. Otherwise they could send us a guided missile with them. This is a situation that has never happened before."

"I was about to remark that there is always a first time, but on second thought I just kept my lips tightly sealed."

"As long as everything runs smoothly in our little self contained world," he continued. "Let's not worry too much."

I left him and walked along the galley platform. Outside you could see the vast endless space through which we were travelling. A pleasant voice greeted me.

"Still the daydreamer, aren't you?"

Diana Peterson was one of the teacher groups with us. Her field was geography and she also taught a class in arithmetic. Her age was twenty-six and she was still single. I could still remember the eager girl of nineteen she was when I first met her aboard our spaceship.

"As long as man dreams, there are still worlds to explore and things to learn," I replied.

She was now at my side and the two of us were looking out through the large plastic window. My hand took hers.

"Diana," I began. "You know I want to marry you? Yet you insist your first dedication is to your work. Haven't you any room in your heart for what we call love?"

She gave me a rather pretty smile when suddenly I heard my name being called.

"Captain Johnson, we have picked up a spaceship on the Radar Screen."

I turned around and followed Cadet Donnelly to the Radar Room. Operator Bensow showed me the image on the screen.

"We are about two weeks travelling time from it, according to my calculations," he said. "We can slow up or change our course if you want to meet it. However I can't seem to make contact with it by radio beam."

Only trouble was that we couldn't change our course, nor could we change our direction. If we did contact the spaceship she would have to change her course, increase her speed and meet us. We then could arrange for a loan of the spare ergo-cells which every spaceship was required to carry.

"Notify me if you make contact with the spaceship," I told Operator Bensow. "Keep her on your screen every minute. Use two relief men when you are off duty."

I didn't see Diana the rest of the day. That evening they were having a party for the younger children. When I met her again she was dressed in a powder blue gown.

"Something is worrying you," she half teased him.

"You," I snapped back.

"Partly correct," she said. "Call it a woman's intuition. You look as though you have a terrible problem on your mind. Can I help you?"

"No," I said sadly. "Nothing you can do about it, but will you dance with me?"

We were on the dance floor only a few minutes, when she stopped and led me to the side.

"This is not your night for dancing. You act as though you were a dead load going through space on one side."

"Darling," I shouted. "That's the answer."

And I left her standing there with an open mouth. I rushed to Commander James Harper's quarters and told him the idea.

"Just now we are coasting on our own momentum. If we shift a lot of our heavy equipment to the port side, we can change direction, and still continue coasting. There is no contact as yet with that spaceship, but we can go in its direction and get those energo-cells."

"It's worth the chance," he remarked. "But if we don't get a message from them then we must conclude they ran into a meteorological shower and there's not a living soul aboard."

We started moving heaving equipment and supplies to the port side, and we in turn began to shift our course. It didn't take long for some of the officers to figure out what must have happened. And it was confirmed when Engineer Thompson, in a routine check, disconnected the automatic feeders.

"The energo-cells are dead," he reported to me.

"Both the commander and myself have known that for some time," I replied. "We are headed for that spaceship."

We were getting close to the craft. Under normal procedures, we would connect airlocks and be able to go from one craft to the other. Our check chart showed definitely we were getting into the path of a possible meteor electrical shower.

"We can't turn back now," I told the commander. "Let us take a look at the screen."

We were going off course again. I wasn't the youngest of twenty in the days when I had entered the service. Yet it was up to me to take the risk.

"I'll put on a space suit with a guided jetmotor," I said. "Then head out for that spaceship. If possible see that she comes next to us. If not, I will bring back at least two energo-cells."

I got into a suit that almost fitted me. Then the men took me into the air lock chamber and slowly changed the pressure. On my side I carried a special tool kit, and then I left my ship and started for that nearby spaceship.

The officers and the men crowded every available window on the ship to watch me. It looked as though I was drifting into space. I had no idea of how long it took me before I managed to hook on to the emergency door outside the airlock. With a wrench I opened the emergency door and then closed it. For safety sake I decided to remain in my space suit. I walked through the length of the spaceship. It was deserted.

Then I went to the Commander's room and read his log. He had started to write the following:

"We may have a chance to survive if we abandon this ship. Time is running out against us. It will blow up and we will all be destroyed. . ."

Whatever it was just hadn't happened. The spaceship was still in existence. I looked for their control room and found the spare energo-cells. Each was about a foot in length and two inches in diameter. I took the entire eight which would be more than enough to take a spaceship even back to Earth.

I had to make a quick decision: To see if I could get this spaceship right back next to ours, or just leave it drift along its path? I decided to trust to my space suit and soon I was on the way back to our spaceship.

Finally I got back to our spaceship. Quickly I got out of my suit and we inserted the new energo-cells into the contact tubes. We were on our way to our destined place — the Asteroid MENIS.

I watched the derelict spaceship fade away. My eyes were focused on it as I stood before one of the windows in the galley. I found a feminine hand taking hold of my hand.

"That was a brave thing you did," said the voice of Diana. "The crew are all talking about it."

I started to turn to her when that little speck in the galaxy that represented a spaceship blew up. Even at this distance we felt a slight concussion. Beads of perspiration began to form on my forehead: What, if I had brought that spaceship right next to ours?

It was the first time in my life I had ever fainted. When I awoke, there was Diana holding my hands.

"You certainly went through an ordeal," said my Commander.

"You must admit," half challenged Diana, "That my future husband is the bravest of the brave."

"No argument about that," chuckled the Commander.

THEIR ORGANS OF SIGHT CAN NOT SENSE THE INFRA-RED PORTION OF THE LIGHT SPECTRUM! BY SCREENING ALL EARTH CITIZENS, WE CAN DETECT THE CREATURES WITHOUT THEIR KNOWING IT!

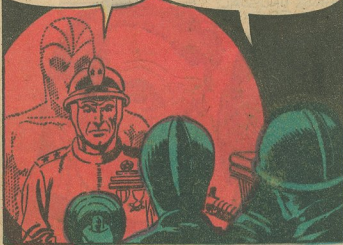

I'VE HAD THOUSANDS OF THESE LIGHTS DISTRIBUTED ALL OVER THE COUNTRY -- IF YOU CONCUR, WE CAN DETECT THE GALACTITES IN A FEW SHORT HOURS.

THE ORDERS WENT OUT -- AND THE GALACTITES WERE DISCOVERED EVERYWHERE...

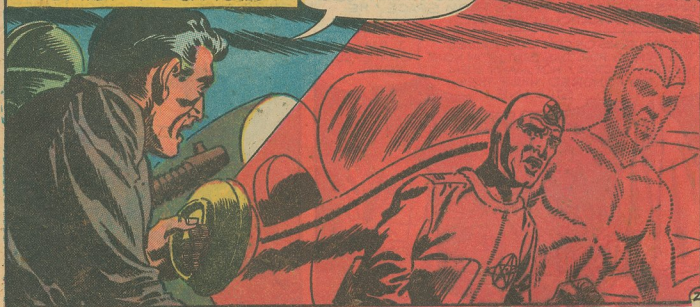

WHAT IS THAT ODD CONTRAPTION, CAPTAIN?

THE GENERAL IS ONE OF THEM! SEIZE HIM!

WHEREVER THE CREATURES WERE FOUND, THEY WERE CAPTURED...

HE'S A GALACTITE! GRAB HIM!

SPACE ADVENTURES

GALACTITES WERE ROUNDED UP FROM CAIRO TO THE KLONDIKE -- THEY WERE GIVEN A CHANCE TO SURRENDER OR BE DESTROYED! HALF OF THEM GAVE UP AND WERE SHIPPED BACK INTO SPACE TO FIND THEIR WAY BACK TO GALAXY L9...

YOU SAY THE MENACE HAS BEEN REMOVED, MR. CRAIGIE?

YES, MR. PRESIDENT! WE CAN CALL OFF THE NATIONAL ALERT -- SEND THE SPACE MARINES BACK TO THEIR FAMILIES!

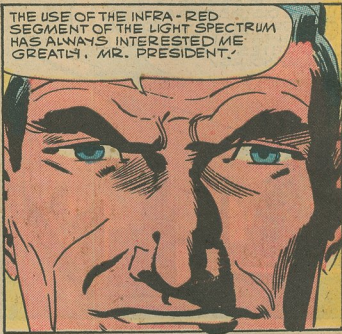

YOU ALONE, MR. CRAIGIE, NOTICED THAT INFRA-RED COULD DETECT THE GALACTITES! ISN'T THAT ODD... OR DO YOU HAVE UNUSUAL POWERS?

I'VE MADE A STUDY OF OUTER-SPACE TYPES, SIR!

THE USE OF THE INFRA-RED SEGMENT OF THE LIGHT SPECTRUM HAS ALWAYS INTERESTED ME GREATLY, MR. PRESIDENT!

CRAIGIE, ALWAYS ALERT, SPOTTED OTHER PROBING INVASIONS BY THE THINGS FROM SPACE! HE BECAME A NATIONAL HERO...

THE CITIZENS OF OUR CITY RAISED THE FUNDS FOR THIS STATUE IN YOUR HONOR, DOCTOR! NOT MANY MEN ARE SO HONORED WHILE THEY STILL LIVE!

I AM GRATEFUL, SIR!

... AND AMAZED AT THE UNIVERSAL STUPIDITY OF THE PEOPLE ON PLANET EARTH! WHEN MY WORLD TAKES CONTROL OF EARTH, WE SHALL DISCONTINUE THE SPECIES!
